Click Computers seeks to expand in 2007

Company uses dedicated customer service to develop a vision

Georgetown, TX – Click Computers, Ltd., a Georgetown-based company started in July of 2004 by young entrepreneur and lifelong resident Rob Hipp, has a big vision for 2007. The company's main point of thriving success has always been its dedication to clients. In 2005, Click Computers was named Georgetown's 2005 Small Business of the Year by the Georgetown Chamber of Commerce because of the "putting customers first" attitude.

The vision for Click Computers caters even more towards customer service. Rob Hipp, the 22 year old founding partner of Click Computers, Ltd., explains the sudden growth of Click Computers.

"In 2006, we were blessed to have continued business growth. I can't explain how excited we all were at what was starting to happen around the office. We had tremendous growth and finally began to see our numbers even out. We went from 4 jobs a day to over 12 and sometimes near 20. One thing we didn't see was that more business started bringing on those common growing-pains. Immediately, we began to tackle the problem.

In 2007, we have already made some bold moves that are beginning to help out. My biggest problem was I was nervous to hire additional help. I didn't want to endanger the reputation of Click Computers that my cousin Josh Caluette and I worked so hard to achieve.

After many weeks, and realizing the edge we have with customer service is what is making us grow so fast, we simply started looking for additional staff. I was telling Josh, in a serious statement, 'I want to hire new help that my grandmother would feel comfortable having around.'

Recently, my brother Charles Hipp began working with us. I enjoy having more family at the office as well as our new technicians. We finally have the ground laid to build a successful company that caters to folks locally and abroad."

Last Monday at the weekly company meeting, Service Manager Josh Caluette, demanded a higher level of customer service in 2007 that would fuel the continued growth of Click Computers. Rob Hipp began to develop the vision as explained:

"I've always been about complete value to our clients. We had to adjust our pricing some to really help us cover our expenses. Now everything is set. Our new vision, which is already starting to unfold, will offer clients guaranteed 24 to 36 hour turnaround times for repairs on computer systems in shop. We are adding more staff to our dedicated team we have now. In the next month, I'm looking forward to expanding our on-site services into Round Rock and Cedar Park, followed by a new store near those areas by the end of the year. On our new computer systems we are offering a 2 year warranty right out of the box. I just want folks to know we do care and are committed to them. We are all working hard to provide exceptional customer service better than ever. I keep telling everybody at the shop our edge is customer service. If we strive, and work hard to keep that going, we have great potential to be the leader in the computing industry in the years to come. We are hoping to have stores nationwide within the next decade and let companies such as Dell know customer service is still number one, not the dollar at the end of the day."

In the next few weeks, Click Computers will launch the full statement of their vision and what the company is looking forward to achieving. One note that always stands out is the customer service aspect of the business. Click Computers seeks to have a national presence in the near future, but still have that home-town attitude and service that has made them successful.
